

Storytellers by Luxmuralis Q&A

Who are Luxmuralis?

Luxmuralis are amongst the world's leading exponents of fine art, light and sound installations.

'Luxmuralis' is the name given to the artistic collaboration Peter Walker, Sculptor, and David Harper, Composer, who specialise in immersive fine art, light and sound installations around the UK and abroad. Creating works across multiple media and presentation formats.

Core to their work is the exploration and development of fine art tradition through new media and place contemporary fine art, light and sound production in an art historical context. Luxmuralis take art onto the streets and provide access to visual artwork in public as well as unexpected places.

Fine art, light and sound reflect closely on the history, heritage and art history of unique places and bring together the contemporary and the ancient. More than a light show, Luxmuralis create contemporary exhibitions whose core is always close to the sense of place.

Which experience by the Luxmuralis team will be held at Truro Cathedral?

Why is Truro Cathedral displaying 'Storytellers' by Luxmuralis?

Truro Cathedral is committed to expanding its offering of exciting events for the community of Cornwall, and to engaging and welcoming new audiences. Luke Jerram's artworks 'Gaia' & 'Mars War & Peace' were exhibited at the cathedral in 2023 and 2025, followed by Luxmuralis' Space in 2024 and 'Time' in 2025. This installation is the next offering in this programme.

Is it appropriate for a light installation like this to be in the cathedral?

Luxmuralis created the first-ever model and method introducing such unique installations inside the interiors of cathedrals and sacred spaces – paving the way for such spaces to be transformed and encouraging new audiences to engage with artwork as well as the space it envelops.

Audiences are immersed in a fine art experience that brings such ancient, monumental and sacred spaces to life. Viewers become part of the artwork as they physically journey through the spectacular sound and light which is described as 'evocative and powerful' by hundreds of thousands who have experienced shows by Luxmuralis.
